

Intro to Wrought Iron Doors

There is all this talk out there about how your front door gives the outside world a description about the residents within the home. It's true; the front door does give each home its own unique characteristic and tells of its owners. This idea is generally in the context of having a wooden door painted a specific color to represent you. This is a fun way to express yourself through your home. In all the time that you have spent thinking about what color door best represents you, have you ever thought of a non-solid wood door? Wrought Iron doors are also a great option for any entry door or interior door. They can have just as much or, dare I say, more character than a door of a specific color.

There are several reasons to consider having a wrought iron door vs. a wooden door.

Safe, Secure and Durable

The first reason is that they are more secure. No homeowner wants their door to be a weak spot in their home. Having a wrought iron door is much stronger than just a wooden door in itself. Being in Florida, the strong hurricane winds can really take a toll on a house. Don't let your door be something that you have to worry about. A great wrought iron door can stand up to debris and high winds as they beat against the door in a storm.

In addition, with wrought iron doors you don't have the wear and tear that you see with wooden door. It's nearly impossible to dent wrought iron, so your door will stay in prime condition even after your door takes a beating. With wooden doors you can easily see dents, bad paint jobs and age much more easily.

Low Maintenance

Iron doors are also a great option because they are low maintenance. Who doesn't like the sound of that? You shouldn't have to re-stain your door every year to keep it looking fresh. In order to clean your door you can just use gentle soap and water, and you have got yourself a clean door. Door maintenance can vary by region, but we would just recommend using a little oil on your hinges about once a year to avoid squeaking.

Elegant and Intricate

Now this is really where wrought iron doors can bring out your personality. Being creative with a design in wrought iron will allow you to have a door that is uniquely you. There are countless designs, both simple and sleek, to classy and intricate. Whatever design you would like on your door can be brought to life with using wrought iron.

Wrought iron doors are both practical and beautiful. These doors are more durable than wooded doors and help against hard natural elements. Wrought iron doors are low maintenance, with as little as squirting some oil on the hinges once a year. With so many beautiful options to choose from, anyone would be able to find a door that suits them. Whatever front door you chose for your home, whether it's wood or wrought iron, make it represent you.
